

year
2022	2024
2023	2025

adidas	Revenue Growth % 10.5%	Revenue 24bn	EBIT Margin % 5.5%	Gross Margin % 0.51	ROCE % 11.7%	Net Margin % 0.03
	Revenue Growth % 2.5%	Revenue 9bn	EBIT Margin % 6.2%	Gross Margin % 0.45	ROCE % 12.8%	Net Margin % 0.03
adidas	Debt to Equity 1.02	DIO 156.20	DPO 96.93	DSO 37.19	CCC 96.46	Operating Cash Flow 2.91bn
	Debt to Equity 0.61	DIO 167.01	DPO 157.07	DSO 51.60	CCC 61.55	Operating Cash Flow 694.8M

Performance Summary: adidas recovered from its 2023 dip — driven by the end of the Yeezy partnership and elevated discounting — through disciplined pricing and lower freight and product costs, reaching record revenue of €24.8 billion and its highest margins in this period by 2025 (EBIT margin 8.3%, up from 1.3% in 2023). Puma, after several years of stable performance, undertook a deliberate strategic reset in 2025 — cutting wholesale volume, reducing promotions, and clearing inventory — which drove revenue down 13.1% to €7.3 billion, pushed EBIT margin to -4.9%, and turned ROCE from a positive 12.8% to -11.0%. A naive trend-based forecast would have closely predicted adidas's 2025 result, but would have missed Puma's decline by roughly 19 percentage points — underscoring that Puma's drop was a deliberate strategic choice, not organic drift.

